STEWARDS.

We are a year into lockdown now and things seem to be moving on at a pace. I would like to say a big thank you to all out stewards who have been very faithful to their commitment every week. Many parishes have had to close because they could not get stewards. We are truly blessed and lucky. Do give them your own personal thanks. And maybe you might be able to help to spread the load. Do consider and talk to one of them about the work involved.

WE ARE OPEN

Let's talk for Lent. Zoom chat every Tuesday evening at 8pm

The information is set out below the zoom will last for 40 minutes.

Topic: St James Lent discussion.

Have a look at the following Sunday's Gospel

Time: Tuesday Feb 23, 2021 08:00 PM London

It would be great to see many/all of you. Don't hid away.

Hi,
Hope you got off to a good start for Lent. If not start again. The Kingdom is within you. You are the most valuable thing on this planet.
Enjoy it.
Love and prayers,
Fr. Jack

EVERYTHING EDUCATION

I saw this in the Evening Post and Pass it on.

From Elaine Cunningham Walker.

Produce successful thriving children in 10 easy steps from Everything Education.

1. Always be there for your child. Show them that everything may be falling apart around them; however you are the constant in their life. You're the one who always believes in them no matter what.
2. Model the behaviour you want from your child. Remember that children do what we do and not what we say. If a child is constantly saying shut up to you, ask yourself where they learnt it.
3. Learn to praise your child for just being them and not for the things they achieved. They were given to you with unique gifts and talents. Your role as a parent is to unearth that gift and help them blossom.
4. Understand your child's learning style. When you do this, finding the right school is a lot less stressful as you place them in an environment where they can fly and thrive and not just survive.
5. Teach your child responsibility from an early age. Let them help around the house and make choices that empower them. By doing this you help build the child's self-esteem as well as their confidence.
6. It is very important to have discipline as part of your parenting; however this has to be positive in order for it to be effective. Discipline cant's come from being punitive. Discipline is the derivative of disciple. You must always lead your children and show them the right way.
7. Teach your children how to be empathetic. Children who learn the skill of empathy end up being effective not just in their school but in their community and at work too.
8. Teach them a work ethic, being born with a gift doesn't mean you will be great. Constantly working at the gift and learning to get better is a good skill to have.
9. Embracing challenge and taking risks, teaching children to try even when they feel they can't is a brilliant tool in self-development.
10. Lessons can be learnt from failure. Let children fail in a safe environment and that be failing, they learn great things about themselves.
